

U.S.-Japan Trade Agreement

Coarse Grains

Overview: In 2023, the United States exported $2.1 billion of coarse grains to Japan, making Japan the #3 overseas market. The United States accounted for 64 percent of Japan's total imports of food grains, excluding wheat and rice. The years below correspond to Japan's fiscal year beginning April 1.

Market Considerations: This agreement provides tariff parity with competing food barley suppliers such as Canada and Australia. Japan maintains a tariff-rate pooled quota under the World Trade Organization (WTO) for certain corn products for which the United States is a dominant supplier. While tariffs on most feed grains are already duty-free, tariff elimination in this agreement provides further opportunities for U.S. corn supply to Japanese snack manufacturers. Most imported U.S. sorghum goes to feed.
